From Research to Publication: PhD Research Presentations and Scientific Writing Workshop

20–22 January 2027 | University of Salamanca, Spain

Are you a doctoral candidate or academic staff member interested in sharing your research and developing scientific writing skills?

The EC2U University Alliance invites doctoral candidates and academic staff from its member universities to take part in a three-day scientific event hosted by the University of Salamanca. The event will bring together researchers working on health-related topics to discuss ongoing research, exchange perspectives and explore how to communicate their work through scientific publications.

The planned programme combines PhD research presentations, contributions from academic staff and a scientific writing workshop, including the publication of research protocols. Sessions will be organised by research theme, with topics such as cancer, diabetes and the influence of geography on health. A guided visit to the city and campus is also planned.

We are looking for participants who:

- Are doctoral candidates with an ongoing thesis project, or academic staff interested in contributing to scientific exchange.
- Would like to share their research and engage in discussion with colleagues from other EC2U universities.
- Can attend the full event in Salamanca from 20 to 22 January 2027.

Doctoral candidates are asked to submit an abstract of their ongoing thesis project and indicate whether they would like to give a 10-minute oral presentation. Academic staff may also offer a presentation of their scientific work.

Key dates

16 December 2026 — Confirmation of participants and research topics.

9 January 2027 — Submission of abstracts and presentations.

14 January 2027 — Release of the final programme.

Interested participants should contact their local EC2U office for information on participation and mobility support. Any funding is subject to the applicable rules and procedures of the sending university.
